To whom it may concern:

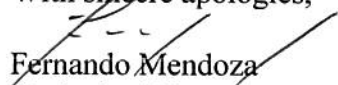

September 8, 2014

In reviewing the charges on my county credit card and compared them to my paypal account, I realized a purchase was made in error to my county credit card. Since my paypal account is my personal account and I frequently do both personal and business transactions on this one account, I have am required to select the payment method per each purchase.

In April and again in July, I made a purchase in which I clearly failed to select or change the payment method and my personal purchase was placed on my county payment method. Please find attached, my repayment of the purchases made. I have reviewed all other transactions made since 2011 and verified there were no other purchases made in error.

In order to avoid this problem in the future, I have created a separate account from my personal paypal and also removed the county credit card as an option so this will not occur again in the future.

With sincere apologies,

Fernando Mendoza
